GREEK WOMEN: THEIR FOLK-POESY. I Have already in the preceding chapter described the beings who figure in the mythological class of folk songs and stories, and I have also referred to the Christian Saints who have in many instances replaced Classic Deities. Many of the stories relating to the supernatural will be found to present features and incidents similar to those which exist in the folk-lore of other nations, and especially in Keltic, Teutonic, Norse, and Eastern fairy-tales.¹ The religious legends are sufficiently numerous, and resemble in many points those told by Moslems of Dervish Evliya. There has no doubt been a considerable amount of mutual borrowing in this as in many other respects. The Greeks take great delight in the histories of their Saints, and recount them with every variety of detail which their lively imaginations can suggest. Among the...
